Skip to Sentence Type Worksheets When contemplating sentence types, you should consider two things: the function and the structure of the sentence. Because of this we can understand sentence type by analyzing the function that the sentence serves. Examples Do you want to study? When scanning for structure, we should first find the action or predicate, which is stay in the above sentence. Use exclamatory sentences sparingly as too much excitement may annoy the reader or listener. When we consider the structure of the sentence, we are interested with how many clauses are in the sentence. In most cases, imperative sentences have no visible subject; rather, the subject is implied. This page will explore both of these concepts to help the reader improve their understanding of sentence types. Most imperative sentences end with a period, but they may also end with an exclamation point. Because of this, all interrogative sentences end in a questions mark. Again, we can ask ourselves, "Who or what shouldn't do that?" The answer, of course, is you again, as the subject of an imperative sentence will usually be the implied you. When we consider the function of the sentence, we are primarily concerned with what punctuation ends the sentence. Imperative Sentences Imperative sentences issue commands. Simple Compound and Complex Sentences PowerPoint Lesson Creating Complex Sentences - Write ten complex sentences. A complex sentence is two or more clauses joined by a subordinating conjunction. While you is never clearly stated in the sentence, it is implied; hence, in imperative sentences, the subject is often the implied you. Don't do that. Interrogative Sentences Interrogative sentences ask questions. Then, to find the subject, we ask ourselves, "Who should stay?" The answer is that You should stay. In each case the speakers request information. In each of these sentences the speaker makes a declaration; hence, they are declarative sentences. Most sentences are declarative. A compound sentence is two or more clauses joined by a coordinating conjunction.
